Ken is counsel with Bryan & Company, where he practices civil litigation and alternative dispute resolution. He finds creative resolutions to complex and challenging problems and brings a wealth of experience to each task. He has developed a reputation as a strategic problem solver who suggests innovative solutions to achieve cost effective results. He resolves civil disputes for his clients through litigation, mediation, and a number of other alternative dispute resolution forums. Ken has appeared in various levels of court including the Federal Court of Canada, in Alberta and elsewhere in various North American Jurisdictions.

Ken has significant experience advising clients on strategic approaches for the resolution of complex multi-party and international disputes. His areas of practice include acting as defence and coverage counsel on claims involving professional liability and E&O claims, as well as insurance litigation for domestic and Lloyd's of London insurers. Ken is also adept at navigating construction litigation, representing design professionals, contractors, and project managers in construction-related claims. His areas of focus include products liability and manufacturer's liability litigation.

Ken has been a guest speaker and presents to a number of groups within the legal industry, in addition to leading seminars for institutional clients. He has been consistently recognized as pre-eminent by The Best Lawyers in Canada publication.
